Razzleberry's

WEATHERFORD — The South Main Street building that originally housed Taco Bell and most recently TCBY/Blimpies is slated to become the original Razzleberry's.

Don Walden, his spouse Brenda Walden and their son Don Mark Walden are preparing the fast food site for an original concept restaurant offering deli fare, fresh salads, baked potatoes and Blue Bell Ice Cream.

The hope is that the concept will be a popular one and there will some day be a Razzleberry's on every Main Street, U.S.A. The family would like to franchise Razzleberry's and use the Weatherford store as a prototype restaurant.

"This is our first restaurant venture, as a family," Don Mark Walden said. "I've worked in at least 10 different Chicken Express Restaurants. We originally wanted to have a Chicken Express restaurant. We've been looking all across Texas for a location for a Chicken Express. But we live in Weatherford and didn't really want to leave. When we found this place we started talking about original concepts and came up with he idea for Razzleberry's."

Razzleberry's planned opening has been tentatively set for mid-March.
